Paying for Past Sins: Fletcher Building (FBU) has seen its score decline markedly this year. This has primarily been a function of a decline in its Governance rating stemming from a variety of issues, this culminated in mass board and management departures, as well as a capital raise via a structure that diluted minority shareholders. This is the second year in a row that FBU's Governance score has decreased and dragged down its overall C&ESG score. With the balance sheet repaired and new management and board largely in place, Governance should improve going forward. There was a slight improvement across the other categories, with Environmental up one notch to B, while the Carbon score remained strong with another A+, and Social was unchanged at B.
